News Briefs — The Conference

Don't Miss This Conversation NOW IN PROGRESS

The first of a series of open conversations on "Ministry With the Poor" is being held TODAY in New York City, but Central Texans can participate online. Please read information about "A Learning Circle on Ministry with the Poor" under the "Denomination" heading below or on the website at www.ctcumc.org. If interested, you can "tune in" during any part of the presentation between 8 a.m. and 12:30 p.m.

Message From Information Technology Director Tracy Dean:

The conference is changing the way we handle the 2009 "Check Out." Basically we will be using a new system that has been assembled by the GCFA. Some of the data that the GCFA has requested has changed, but the overall process should still be the same. There will still be a table to put in your numbers. You will still see comparative number for the current and previous years. It will look a little different, but other than that it does the same thing. There will be more information to follow as we get closer to "Check Out" time.

BOM Mail Service Curtailed During Holidays

The Board of Ordained Ministry, located on the Texas Wesleyan University campus, will be without incoming mail service during the university's Christmas holiday, Monday, Dec. 21, through Monday, Jan. 4. Please call Gala Trimble at 817-795-7120 to make arrangements for other forms of delivery if necessary.

Glen Lake Camp Year-End Gift Update

As of today, Glen Lake Camp & Retreat Center has received just under $14,000 in year-end gifts as the result of a previous article in E-Link and efforts of the camp's Board of Directors. "We are so grateful to all who have given thus far, but the economy has taken its toll on the camp," states Executive Director Steve Nance. Cancellations for this past year, he reports, totaled over $85,000, most of these due to the economy.

Fixed expenses like debt service and utilities cannot be ignored. "Neither can they be met in a timely fashion unless caring Methodists respond with some generous financial help," according to Diane Griffin, GLC&RC Board chair. She asks the thousands of beneficiaries (past and present) of Glen Lake to consider doing three things:

- Pray for this vital ministry of the CTC.

- Promote year-round utilization of both campuses (Glen Lake and Still Water Lodge) among the decision makers in your church as well as other organizations to which you belong.
 - Make a generous contribution to Glen Lake before the end of the year.
- Every contribution, large or small, will help. You can send your contribution to Glen Lake Camp & Retreat Center, P.O. Box 928, Glen Rose, TX 76043.

Today's Status on the Student Day Offering

Next spring when our students will be looking for scholarships from the UM Board of Higher Education & Ministry and the conference Higher Education Task Force, some will be very disappointed. As of today, only 98 of our congregations have participated in the Student Day Offering, a prerequisite for their students receiving scholarships. That means students from 124 of our churches will be ineligible. In 2009, the Higher Education Task Force was forced to turn down two highly qualified students because their congregations DID NOT participate in the Student Day Offering. Please don't let this happen to the students at your church. This year the UMC's Office of Loans & Scholarships had far more qualified students apply and far fewer funds available.

The Five Practices of Fruitful Congregations ... join the blog!

Are you interested in continuing to learn new ideas and to share their own “best practices?” Consider the lively blog “discussion” initiated by Bishop Robert Schnase. The latest posting (12.14.09) is a new blog message by Bishop Schnase at www.fivepractices.org: “151. Only if... At our Annual Conference session in June, Rev. Emanuel Cleaver II (Assistant to the Bishop for African-American Leadership Development) provoked us to think in fresh ways about our human tendency to grumble and avoid work rather than to take responsibility and fulfill tasks.” Read more...

Spotlight on Our Conference History

Rev. Enoch Mather Marvin was a successful pastor in St. Louis, Mo., who sympathies with the Confederacy caused him to leave his pastorate there in 1862 and spend two years ministering to troops and preaching as opportunities presented themselves. Because of his powerful presentations, he was often invited to preach revival meetings. Dr. John H. McLean told of asking Marvin to preach a protracted meeting at Jefferson, TX.

“He came on horseback, was dressed in a suit of brown homespun jeans with stirrup leathers worn through the inside of his pantlegs from riding on horseback. His coat had broadcloth cuffs and collar . . .” or the history goes. During 1866 he preached many times in Marshall and when the pastor there died in 1865, the church requested that Marvin be appointed there. He was.

In 1866 he went to General Conference in New Orleans. He arrived to find that he had been elected bishop the day before. His hair was untrimmed and his beard was long “and covered his face” and his attire was scarcely appropriate for an episcopal leader. Though he was willing to wear a suit purchased for $65, he refused to have a barber trim his hair or beard. He is reputed to have said that if they wanted him to be a bishop, they would have to take him as he was. Bishop Marvin presided at the organizing session of the Northwest Texas Conference (now Central Texas) at Waxahachie Sept. 16, 1866. He was our Conference’s first bishop.

The CTC’s 100th anniversary will be observed next year with the creation of a conference history book and special anniversary events. For those who wish to make a contribution to help defray the costs, a check marked “100th Celebration” may be sent to Central Texas Conference, 464 Bailey Ave., Fort Worth 76107. One suggestion is for individuals to contribute $1 per year for the number of years they have been in the bounds of the conference.

A Learning Circle on Ministry with the Poor — NOW IN PROGRESS

The first of a series of open conversations on “Ministry with the Poor,” a current priority of the UMC, is being held today (Dec. 16), and broadcast live on the Internet from 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. (Central time) and can be accessed online at <http://gbgm-umc.org/learningcircles>. “Tune in” at any time during this program. (Penny Yaites is online at this moment and reports the materials/information is excellent.) The General Board of Global Ministries apologizes for the short notice, but the possibility of streaming “has just arisen,” they say. The live Internet feed makes possible a permanent record of the conversation that can be posted online and also will be available at a later date.

The discussion is taking place at the UMC of the Village in New York City and is sponsored by GBGM, the international mission agency of the denomination. Global Ministries has special responsibility for a focus area on ministry with the poor. An initial panel deals with micro-credit as a tool in poverty alleviation. A second considers restorative justice in leading to more productive lives for ex-offenders. Invited participants, including a group of Global Ministries directors, will interact at lunchtime with persons from Hope for Our Neighbors in Need, a program of the Church of the Village.

Central Texas Churches Urged to Meet Africa University Fund Obligations

CTC congregations are urged to fully meet their Africa University Fund apportionment obligations before the end of the year. Africa University is sustained by UM congregations' support of the Africa University Fund, a $2.5 million annual commitment spread across annual conferences. CTC's commitment to the fund is $38,051 in 2009. "UMs in Central Texas know how important Africa University is to the church, and to Africa's growth and development. They know it is important to support the university in their prayers, their service, and their financial commitments," said James Salley, the university's associate vice chancellor for development. The fund enables hundreds of student to attend the college every year. In the 2009-2010 school year, Africa University's 1,160 students represent 28 African nations.

"The level of our annual conferences' commitment affects students at the university," Salley said. "When we don't live up to that commitment, deserving Africans can't get the education they need so they can help improve the quality of life for communities and countries." One prime example is the work of Walter Manyangarirwa of Zimbabwe, an Africa University graduate who went on to Clemson University in South Carolina for additional training. After earning a doctorate in entomology at Clemson, Dr. Manyangarirwa returned to Africa University, where he teaches and is one of the few doctoral level entomologists on the continent. "Dr. Manyangarirwa is a wonderful example of our mission at Africa University, training leaders who remain in Africa to make a difference," Salley said. Through Africa University, he received a world-class education. His knowledge and skills are vital to improving and sustaining crops across Africa."

Last year, volunteers helped Tarrant County families receive more than $2.4 million in earned income tax credits and more than $2 million in child tax credits. The IRS estimates that Tarrant County citizens are actually eligible for about $100 million in tax credits. Most credits are not claimed. For details or to volunteer, contact Pablo Calderon at 817-258-8056 or visit www.unitedwaytarrant.org.
